

Elite Aviation Products Announces Corporate Roll-up into Elite Aerospace Group

(Tustin, CA – February 14, 2017): Dustin Tillman CEO of Elite Aviation Products (EAP) formally announced today that Elite Aviation Products, along with its sister company Elite Engineering Services (EES), have completed their corporate rollup into their new parent company Elite Aerospace Group.

"From day one it has been our primary mission as a company to provide a service experience unlike any other supplier in the aerospace industry," Tillman stated, "Part of that mission is providing auxiliary services in addition to our manufacturing business, including engineering services, logistics & integration, and financial services to name a few. This is the pathway to truly becoming the integrator our customers need now more than ever."

In addition to EAP and EES, three new entities have also been created under the Elite Aerospace Group umbrella. These entities include: Elite Logistics & Integration, Elite 360 Technologies, and Elite Financial Services.

"By providing this wide array of solutions under one roof, we are revolutionizing the way OEMs and others within the supply chain do business," COO Zeeshawn Zia commented "The aerospace industry is facing a crisis. There simply isn't enough capacity to keep up with the unprecedented demands of the marketplace. By creating a new type of all-inclusive business model, we are bringing a new level of efficiency into the supply chain and capitalizing on the tremendous opportunity at hand."
